

ABSTRACT

A method for cooling the discharge tube in a gas discharge or atomic emission detector is described. An air cooled discharge detector is also disclosed. In the method and the detector, air is passed over the outer surface of the discharge tube thereby cooling the outer and inner surface of the discharge tube. Air cooling is utilized in any gas discharge detector including radio frequency powered atomic emission detectors.